THE EMERGING REGULATORY LANDSCAPE: A ROUNDTABLE CONFERENCE

co-sponsored by: The George Washington University Law School and Institute for Law and Economic Policy with support from Huntington Bank

Following an acute economic crisis, proposals to reform financial regulation and enforcement abound. While numerous steps were taken during the crisis, events suggest need to consider more comprehensive evaluations. Weighty issues are at stake, including elements of the legislative agenda, the shape of resulting federal enforcement and the enforcement role of states and private parties. The George Washington University Law School and ILEP wish to facilitate discussion of related public policy issues by convening a roundtable of participants in policy formulation. This will be held at The George Washington University Law School in Washington DC on Friday November 6, 2009.
