I. DESCRIPTIONS OF SEMINARS AND COURSES COVERING “SELECTED TOPICS...TO BE ANNOUNCED AT THE TIME OF REGISTRATION”

The Law School Bulletin indicates that certain seminars and courses will cover “selected topics ... to be announced at the time of registration.” The following paragraphs describe the coverage of seminars and courses of this type that will be offered in the Fall 2020 Semester. Please see the Law School Bulletin for the description of other seminars and courses. Enrollment in each seminar is limited. Enrollment in each course may be limited.

~~6264-10 Securities Law Seminar: Enforcement of the Federal Securities Law (2) Sture~~

~~The Securities and Exchange Commission is the largest and most important agency that enforces financial laws and regulations. Its enforcement policies and practices have a profound effect on corporate culture, capital formation, and financial markets. Understanding how the SEC investigates possible violations and enforces its laws is important for lawyers engaged in complex civil and criminal litigation and for corporate lawyers counseling public companies and financial institutions. This course supplements the corporations and securities law courses and applies principles developed in the civil procedure and criminal procedure classes. It goes into depth concerning frequent subjects of enforcement actions, such as insider trading, financial fraud, violations by brokers and investment advisors, enforcement processes and remedies, and legal, tactical and issues facing lawyers who practice before the SEC. A former associate director of the SEC’s Division of Enforcement leads the seminar. Guest speakers also present to the class. The course is aimed at students interested in corporate law and governance, litigation, and white collar investigations and litigation. (Research paper and class participation) CANCELLED~~

6351-11 Reading Group: Appalachia’s Resistance Movements and the Development of Federal Law (1) Hammond E.

This course examines key resistance movements in Appalachia and those movements’ relationships to contemporary issues impacting both Appalachia and the United States as a whole. Using readings and discussion, the course introduces students to acts of civil disobedience and other direct action in Appalachia that led to the development of federal law, including major environmental, energy, and labor and workplace safety laws. By linking these developments to current events, students will hone their abilities to identify, understand, and consider critically how resistance movements can highlight the existence of gaps in the law and, sometimes, offer ways to fill those gaps. (Writing Assignments)

6351-12 Reading Group: Free Speech in Public Schools and Colleges (1) Ross

This reading group analyzes constitutional issues arising from speech in public educational settings from kindergarten through universities—a subject of great contemporary interest and political debate. The primary text is Lessons in Censorship: How Schools and Courts Subvert Students’ First Amendment Rights, supplemented by additional readings. Students will be evaluated based on two papers under 1,500 words each which will not require additional research; skill in leading one class discussion, and seminar participation. This course is graded on a CR/NC basis. (Writing Assignments)

6351-13 Reading Group: Blockchain Law & Policy (1) Pepe

This course is designed to provide an overview of blockchain law and technology. On the technology side, students will obtain a basic understanding of cryptocurrencies and tokens, blockchain consensus mechanisms, current and anticipated use cases, and significant projects in the blockchain space today. Building off this learning, students will gain exposure to the current state of the laws implicated by blockchain projects, including the securities laws, commodities laws, tax laws, and other selected federal and state laws. No technical background is required for this course. This course is graded on a CR/NC basis. (Writing assignments)

6351-14 Reading Group: Celebrities and Wrongs against Women (1) Kohn

This reading group will explore domestic violence committed by and against the rich and famous as a vehicle to explore both the exceptionalism and universality celebrity domestic violence. Sessions will also explore the legacy of the #MeToo movement and wrongs committed against women in the workplace by high profile executives. Enrollment is limited. This course is graded on a CR/NC basis and will meet 6-7 times per semester for two hours. (Writing assignments)

6351-15 Reading Group: Quest for Financial Stability (1) Pam, Liu

This reading group will provide a high-level overview of the issue of international financial stability, including consideration of some representative 21st century national and international financial crises, approaches to financial crisis management and resolution by international institutions and other key actors, and present day vulnerabilities and emerging issues (fintech, AML/CFT). Co-instructor Yan Liu's experience as a senior lawyer (and current Deputy General Counsel) at the International Monetary Fund will be drawn upon for insights into law and policy. This course is graded on a CR/NC basis. (Writing assignments)

6351-20 Reading Group: Crisis & Legal Controversy in the CIA (1) Petrila

This course is designed to examine fundamental legal issues that have arisen regarding the mission of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). It is designed to focus on a series of issues in which there is substantial unclassified information in the public domain. The course will introduce students to key events and policy decisions that have had significant impact on the legal structure under which the Intelligence Community operates. The course will provide a basic understanding of several major policy decisions that the CIA was charged with implementing, and will enable students to more readily identify, understand, and analyze associated legal issues and risks (to include separation of powers issues) that were a consequence of these policy decisions. This course is graded a CR/NC basis. (Writing assignments)

6378-11 Selected Topics in Criminal Law: Data, Science, Law & Policy (2) Braman

This course is intended to give the student a practical appreciation of the contributions and limitations of machine learning as applied to public policy inside government, as well as a familiarity with the basic skills needed to conduct data science projects. Emphasis will be given to coping with the conceptual, methodological, organizational, political, and ethical problems which face data scientists and policymakers evaluating data scientific techniques, including machine learning and artificial intelligence. The various tasks facing program evaluators will be discussed, from developing the questions to presenting the data. (Writing assignments, problem sets, and final report and presentation)

6378-12 Selected Topics in Criminal Law: Data-Driven Criminal Justice Reform (2) Braman

This course is designed to help students from different disciplines think critically about the criminal justice system as they develop tools to assist with real-world criminal justice reform. It is premised on the insight that work of this kind requires collaboration across disciplines, with consideration to ethical issues throughout a given project. (Writing assignments, problem sets, and final report and presentation)

6399-10 Constitutional Law Seminar: Leading Cases in Context (2) Maggs, Justice Thomas

Opinions in leading Supreme Court cases usually reveal only part of a complex story. Although they discuss the facts immediately leading to the litigation, they often do not fully expose the motivations of the litigants or the social and political context of legal controversies. The opinions also cannot describe the reactions to the Court's decisions or the decisions' subsequent influence. Discovery of additional facts about the context of a particular case often yields a deeper or different understanding of the Supreme Court's actions. In this seminar, students will observe this phenomenon by studying a more complete story of a number of leading cases than is usually presented in Constitutional Law courses. The seminar will culminate with each student writing and presenting a thorough history of a Supreme Court decision not discussed in class. Prerequisites: Law 6214 (Constitutional Law) and Law 6380 (Constitutional Law II). (Class participation, presentation, and research paper)

6405-20 Selected Topics in Advanced Antitrust Law: Antitrust in the Health Care Sector (2)

Leibenluft, Oliver

This seminar will address the application of antitrust law in the health care sector, including the antitrust analysis of professional codes of ethics, provider networks and managed care contracting, ACOs, joint ventures, hospital and health plan mergers, the conduct of dominant firms, conduct that can deter generic drug entry, and exemptions which may shield certain conduct from antitrust scrutiny. We will discuss the policy and practical issues that arise in applying the antitrust laws to a heavily regulated industry in which typical market forces often do not appear to apply. Students will be expected to take part in several “role playing” exercises during the course of the semester that will emphasize “real life” issues that arise in the practice of health antitrust law. The course is aimed at students who intend to practice antitrust law, or who will work in health law and wish to understand how antitrust applies to the health care sector. Prerequisites: Law 6402 (Antitrust Law) or Law 6410 (Health Care Law) or permission of the instructor. (Examination, presentation, and writing assignments) MOVED TO SPRING 21

6411-10 Health Care Law Seminar: Traumatic Brain Injury (2) Kaplen

This seminar will examine the issues that confront attorneys in their representation of an individual with a traumatic brain injury, both in and out of the courtroom. The intertwined medical and legal issues related to brain injury and its consequences will also be studied. Topics relating to public perception of brain injury and implications for the legal profession, necessary areas of proof including the use of demonstrative evidence, expert witnesses, challenges to the admission of expert testimony, and trial practice skills in both the prosecution and defense will be discussed. Accessing government benefits and the legal implications of the concussion crisis in amateur and professional sports are other included topics. (Research paper and class participation)

6441-10 Energy Law Seminar: Energy Commodities (2) Malyshev, Waldman

This course will focus on the connections between the trading in physical commodity markets and the related financial derivatives markets. The students will learn the fundamentals of US federal commodity regulations and enforcement and will discuss policy and innovative trends in the industry (e.g., the use of blockchain and cryptocurrencies for the physical commodity trading). Through a series of case studies, the students will become familiarized with the industry practices affecting power, natural gas and crude oil and how these commodities trade as forwards, swaps, options and futures. The lectures will cover: (1) overview of derivatives and energy commodity trading generally; (2) the concepts of hedging and speculation; (3) the evolution of the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936 (CEA); (4) the jurisdiction of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC), the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) and the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), including areas of overlap and difference among the three agencies; (5) application of commodity trading and derivatives statutes and regulations to new products, such as bitcoin, blockchain and other FinTech innovations; (6) analysis of energy commodity contracts, documentation and legal drafting; (7) enforcement actions relating to physical commodities, case studies; (8) registration and regulation of market participants, such as brokers, hedge fund operators, investment advisers, swap dealers and energy commodity traders; (9) administrative and injunctive enforcement powers involving violations of the CEA and other regulations; and (10) international aspects of commodity markets. (Research paper and class participation) CANCELLED

6461-10 Selected Topics in Environmental Law: US Electric Industry in Transition (2) Attanasio

In this practice-focused, skills-building seminar, students will advise a “client” who is seeking to introduce a disruptive technology into the U.S. electric system on the challenges posed and solutions available. Readings, lectures, and class exercises will introduce students to the organization, operations, and financial drivers of the U.S. electric industry and its regulation. Through substantial independent research, students will explore how different states, regions, and regulators resolve the conflicts posed by change. (Writing assignments, oral presentations, short research papers) (E/Skills)

6509-20 Government Contracts Seminar: Foreign Gov't Contracts (2) Yukins/ Green A

This seminar will examine many issues associated with the increase in public procurement being done across borders—whether through international aid assistance or foreign military sales, or direct purchases by foreign government. This new, highly globalized public procurement market presents special legal and policy issues, including export controls, anti-corruption requirements, and unique legal rules for certain types of foreign assistance. This course, co-taught by a co-director in the government contracts program and a senior member of the bar, offers an introduction to the practical and real-world challenges of transnational public procurement. (Research paper)

6513-21 Selected Topics in Government Contracts: Negotiations (2) Vadiee

This course provides experiential learning for students planning a career in government contracts law, whether at a private law firm, for the government, or within a private company. The instruction will focus on negotiation considerations and methods used during formation and administration of government contracts. Each class will require students to participate in discussion and simulations of different negotiations that take place in government contracts, while considering the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR), the government contract lifecycle, and the constraints and objectives of the government, prime contractors, and subcontractors. The course will provide simulation fact patterns which students will be expected to review and form negotiation positions and plans thereon according to their assigned roles. For certain classes, judges and practitioners with experience in the topic of discussion will be invited to participate in the simulations and present their input and experience.

No prerequisite courses required but at least one of the following is recommended: Law 6500 (Government Contracts), Law 6502 (Formation of Government Contracts), and/or Law 6503 (Performance of Government Contracts). (Simulation, short paper, class participation) (Skills/E)

~~6513-22 Selected Topics in Government Contracts: *Acquisition Policy Making (1) Blum~~

~~This course builds on foundational government procurement law courses that expose students to the “macro” aspects of policymaking, namely, how to create calls to action (through research papers) that focus stakeholders on critical issues facing the acquisition community. This course will turn students’ attention to the bridge between these activities and the “micro” aspects of policymaking, including drafting and analysis of procurement laws and regulations. Through experiential learning, students will be introduced to and develop materials commonly used to inform and make recommendations for policymakers in an analytically clear and balanced manner. (Research paper and presentation) MOVED TO SPRING 21~~

~~6562-10 Public International Law Seminar: *Arms Control (2) Carnahan, Poore~~

~~This seminar will examine the underlying rationale behind various international arms control, counterterrorism and non-proliferation agreements to which the United States is a party, both strategic and conventional. Students will study the negotiations which brought these agreements into force, review their major provisions, and discuss issues involving the implementation of and compliance with these agreements. Federal implementing legislation will also be addressed, with emphasis on the Atomic Energy Act of 1954. Prerequisite or concurrent registration: Law 6520 (International Law). (Research paper and class participation) CANCELLED~~

~~6648-13 Negotiations (Sports Transactions) (1) Falk, D., Cantor~~

~~Instruction will focus on negotiation considerations and methods used during the formation and administration of sports contracts. Each class will require students to participate in discussion and simulations of the different negotiations that take place in sports contracts. Students will be equipped with a deeper understanding of negotiation techniques, strategies and approach, the impact of external and~~

~~internal regulations of individual sports leagues in contract negotiation, and practical experience in engaging in the contract negotiation process. (Simulation, short paper, class participation) (Skills/E).~~

6869-11 Selected Topics in National Security Law: Problems Trying Terrorists (2) Breinholt

The course is intended to be a deep-dive into the art and mechanics of trial advocacy in the specific context of U.S. terrorism prosecutions. It is a combination of criminal law, evidence, national security law, and trial advocacy. The non-exclusive emphasis will be on the “material support to terrorists” crimes, which are the most common choice for U.S. terrorism prosecutors. Prerequisite: Law 6230 (Evidence). (Writing assignments)

6869-12 Selected Topics in National Security Law: Law of Secrecy (2) McClanahan

This course will examine the intricate legal framework by which the U.S. government designates information as classified or otherwise related to national security, controls access to that information, and allows its disclosure. The course will begin with discussing the constitutional arguments surrounding these matters, largely focusing on separation of powers concerns. Then the phenomenon of leaks and the criminal prohibitions on such disclosures will be examined. The course will then consider the law governing situations in which classified information is implicated in litigation, focusing primarily on the state secrets privilege in civil cases and the Classified Information Procedures Act in criminal cases. Next the class will examine the system in which decisions are made to grant or deny access to classified information through the use of security clearances and related determinations. The final part of the course will address the legal framework for the classification and declassification of information, including a discussion of the prepublication review regime. (Writing assignments, role playing exercise, class participation)

6869-21 Selected Topics in National Security Law: Technology Foundations for Cybersecurity (1) Clark, Jackson

This course examines basic technical concepts relevant to the law. It is designed as a foundational course that will introduce students to key terms and concepts related to cybersecurity. The course will provide a basic understanding of cybersecurity topics that will empower students to more easily identify, understand, and analyze associated legal issues. This course is recommended for students who have little to no technical knowledge but intend to enroll in cyber-related courses as part of their academic curriculum. Students who have prior technical knowledge should not enroll in this course. (This course is graded on a CR/NC basis) (Mid-term examination and take-home examination)

6869-22 Selected Topics in National Security Law: Transnational Security (2) Stigall

This course is designed to provide an overview of key transnational threats (including terrorism and transnational organized crime) and the legal frameworks used by state actors to counter them. Students will learn about the key actors and institutions used for international cooperation and the challenges faced in pursuing evidence and fugitives across national boundaries. (Examination, class presentation, class participation)

6872-10 National Security Law Seminar: Domestic Terrorism (2) Brzozowski

This course will examine the legal architecture that undergirds domestic terrorism investigations and prosecutions and the policy consequences that flow from that framework. Students will consider domestic terrorism in context, assess its historical evolution, and evaluate the resulting legal and policy implications. Students will better understand the distinctions between international and domestic terrorism and appreciate the singular peculiarities of domestic terrorism investigations and prosecutions. This course also will assess the broader impact of domestic terrorism on the public in general. Students will consider how domestic terrorism is understood by the media, by advocacy organizations and academic institutions. We will evaluate efforts to study domestic terrorism, consider the conclusions drawn from these studies, and weigh their impact on policymaking in this area of national security. Finally, this course will provide insights into the ever-shifting crosscurrents between law and policy as our nation charts a course between liberty and security. Domestic terrorism uniquely illustrates the many challenges and obstacles in navigating this terrain. (Research paper and class participation)

~~6872-20 National Security Law Seminar: Government Oversight/Investigation (2) M.K. Smith~~

~~This seminar provides students with the knowledge and skills necessary to become effective practitioners in the fields of government oversight and internal investigations and examines the role of the Department of Homeland Security, Office of Inspector General in protecting national security. The seminar focuses heavily on Inspector General legal authorities, the report writing process, and effective interviewing techniques. This seminar also examines oversight mechanisms within the Department of Justice, the Department of Defense, and the Office of the Director of National Intelligence. (Research paper and class participation) CANCELLED~~

This course gives students the opportunity to explore the role of counsel assigned to a bid protest related to award of a government contract, either as agency counsel, protest counsel, or intervenor counsel. In their first year of practice, most government contracts attorneys will encounter bid protest litigation in one form or another. The bid protest scenario presented in this course will be similar to complex, multi-million dollar cases attorneys face in practice. Similar to practitioners, students will experiment with litigation strategies and construct arguments on behalf of clients throughout the bid protest process.

Throughout the course, students will receive faculty and peer feedback on oral and written advocacy work products. This course will be offered for 2 credits in the Fall 2020 semester.
